The Gould Family

Your Grandmother was Hesper Gould Simmons
Your Grandfather was Ray Clement Simmons

Hesper's father was Frank C. Gould (always known as F.C.) He married Ada May Merrill.

F.C. started the Silver Lane Pickle Company in East Hartford, Conn. The story is that he started with a pushcart selling pickles. I'm not sure that is literally true, but he certainly started very small. The company grew tremendously and was taken over by Ray Simmons when he married Hesper.

F.C.'s father was Henry B. Gould. He married Mahala Amanda Ford. He was born 1820, Died 1908.

Henry's father was William Gould, 1790-1865. He married Sophia ? May have married in Cape Breton, Nova Scotia.

William's father was James Gould, Jr. 1765-1844. He married Mary Payne.

James' father was Lt. James Gould, Sr. 1743-1822. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, and apparently was wounded. He was a commissioned officer in the 1st New Hampshire Regiment.

James, Sr.'s father was Nehemiah Gould 1715-1758. He was born in Groton, Mass. Married Esther Bower
Nehemia was killed by Indians 1758 at Lake George, New York. He was a soldier in the French and Indian War.

Nehemia's father was Thomas Gould, Jr. 1667-1732. He married Abigail Needham.

Thomas, Jr.'s father was Thomas Gould Sr. Abt. 1639-1690. He was born in Salem Village, Mass. (Now Danvers).

The Goulds came from England but exactly when needs more research. They migrated at some point to New Hampshire from Connecticut.

HANNAH GOULD DAY CELEBRATES HER 102ND BIRTHDAY

Manchester, N.H. Paper Prints Interesting Article About a Member of the Gould Family, an Aunt of Frank C. Gould and Mrs. Gould Leete. A Long Lived Family

Below is printed a special to the Manchester, N.H. Daily Union in regard to Mrs. Hannah Gould Day, who is related to Mrs. Gould Leete, a niece, and Frank C. Gould, a nephew.

She comes of a long lived family. Her father, William Gould, lived to be 92. F. C. Gould's father died while en route from East Hartford to Warren, N.H.. He had been visiting his son there. He was 88 years and five months old at the time of his death. Mrs. Day's sister lived to be 97 and Mary Gould Talbot, another sister, lived to be 92, and a brother, James, attained the age of 99. But Mrs. Day out-lived them all.

The Union's article follows:
Special to the Union:

PIKE, Oct. 16 - Cosily seated in her own little corner back of the big stove in the cheery living room of the house that has been her home for many years, warmly wrapped in her little gray jacket, and with a close fitting blue cap on her head, safely sheltered from chilly drafts or the too hot glare of the sun's rays the little woman who will be 102 years old next Monday sat to have her picture taken. It is in this corner that Mrs. Day spends most of her time.

Hannah Gould was born in Cape Breton Isle October 15, 1826, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Gould. She was one of 16 children of whom she is the sole survivor.

When Hannah was 6 years old her parents came to the States, making the journey by water and landing at Boston. Not long did they tarry there but moved on to "Old Haverhill", Mass., and after a brief stay there, set out for Haverhill, N.H., making the entire journey on foot. The baby was carried in a two wheel cart, the other members of the family walking until little feet refused to go any further. Then each child, in turn, was placed in the cart and baby was borne in the arms of mother or father. By walking night and day, resting only when and as long as was absolutely necessary, the long miles were covered in six days. In telling of that long ago, memorable trip, Mrs. Day says "We fared hard." Great was their joy when they reached what is now Pike, but was then known as East Haverhill, and came to rest in the home of Uncle Phineas Gould, the house now owned and occupied by Kenneth Pike and family.

Built Several Houses

The first home of the Gould family was built a little to the west of the Brushwood road. Mr. Gould, who was a carpenter, was the builder of many a house that is still standing in Pike, among them being the Sherwell houses, both of which were associated with early days of whetstone manufacture in Pike. Indeed, some of the older residents of Pike claim that the first whetstones ground in Pike were ground by Mrs. Gould and her daughters.

At the age of 23 Hannah Gould was married to Daniel W. Day, who was born at Parsonfield, Maine, in 1825, and who, at the age of 7, came here with his parents making the journey in a 4-ox cart, carrying the whole family, as well as the household goods. To Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Day, six children were born: Zelendor, Emma, Isaiha, Simon, Joseph and Peabody. Of these, three are still living: Zelendor, (Mrs. Robert Bagley of Boston), Joseph Day of Haverhill and Peabody of Pike. Ezekiel Day died in 1889.

Although she left Cape Breton at so early an age, Mrs. Day can recall her father's returning from a hunting and fishing trip accompanied by several Indians who spent more than one night sleeping on the floor about the fireplace.

Mrs. Day apparently inherited her father's love for trapping and fishing for when she was a small girl she would care for the snares, often supplementing the family larder with an offering of from 15 to 20 rabbits at a time. And she tells of one instance when she brought home a big catch of trout. When questioned as to how she caught them she confessed that she was guilty of "liming." She had heard that liming, although not permissible, was one sure way of becoming a successful fisherman, so she went to the foot of Black Mountain where her father was at work, got some lime and threw it in the brook. The trout were eaten, but Hannah was not permitted to repeat the performance.

Mrs. Day has always been, and still is, an ardent lover of flowers, but can no longer care for them, although she does get out among them occasionally. Asters, iris and the old fashioned hollyhocks are her favorites, but in late years only the perennials bear mute but glowing testimony to her planting and care. Mrs. Day's hearing has yielded to the advance of years and her eyesight is almost gone. She is bent and wrinkled but her general health is good.

For many years she has made her home with her youngest son, Peabody, in a little one story brick building with a stone floored "cell" kitchen. The house is situated on the old turnpike, which is the direct road from Haverhill to Plymouth. There Mrs. Day has lived for nearly three quarters of a century.

Four years ago, at the age of 59, Peabody Day was stricken with infantile paralysis which left the entire lower part of his body helpless. However, Mr. Day had heavy steel braces made to fit from waist to feet and with these, and the aid of heavy rope looped in the doorways he can swing himself anywhere about the house.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Moore and family have taken residence at the Day home now and between them all Mrs. Day receives the best of care.

Note:

Hannah Gould Day was the great great aunt of Earle Frank Alfred Gould of East Hartford, Conn. Hannah Day died October 17, 1929. Daniel W. Day died September 22, 1914. - Both are buried in the Ladd Street Cemetery. Uncle Phineas Gould is buried in the cemetery on Rt. 25 in Pike, N.H. with his wife Mary Jones Gould. He died May 14, 1851. She died July 4, 1862. Both were 84 at time of death.
